TradeStation Securities Becomes First US Broker to Launch Options Trading on TradingView

New and existing clients of TradeStation Securities and TradingView now can trade options directly from the TradingView platform.

PLANTATION, Fla., January 27, 2025--TradeStation Securities, Inc. ("TradeStation Securities"), an award-winning[†] self-clearing online brokerage firm for trading stocks, options, futures, and futures options, announces that it will be the first US broker to launch options trading on TradingView, a charting and trading platform, and social network for traders and investors.

"TradeStation will be the first US broker for options trading as TradingView introduces this asset class to its platform," said John Bartleman, President and CEO of TradeStation Group, Inc., the parent company of TradeStation Securities. "With the options integration, new and existing TradeStation clients can leverage direct-market access, free real-time and Level 2 data as well as Market Depth trading, all through one single connection on the TradingView platform. This collaboration reinforces TradeStation Securities' role as a catalyst for traders looking to create their ultimate trading experience."

"For over a decade, TradingView has consistently expanded its offerings, adding new assets and markets to its global platform," said Pierce Crosby, General Manager of TradingView. "We are excited to collaborate with TradeStation Securities to bring options trading to our community, reinforcing our shared commitment to democratizing data and information access for investors worldwide."
